Inner Guard Rails Along Promenades So Constructed that Children Cauld Be Dashed to Death Beneath Them.

MENACE ALSO FOR LIVES OF CARELESS ADULTS.

Top Rung of Fence So Low Grown Persons May Fall Over It-Splendid Place for Would-Be Suicides.

What seems to be a serious oversight the part of those who built the senades on the new Williamsburg Bridge, and what is certainly dangerous to the lives of small children, is the lack of protection afforded by the inner guard rails. Beginning at the ends of the bridge, where the two romenades separate, three parallel pes run along the inner side of each

Between the bottom rung of the fence and the fleer of the promenade is a space sufficiently large for a good-sized illd to roll under. When it is considered that thousands of little ones go out on this bridge daily and frolic about, it can be readily realized that it would be easy enough for one of them to trip and and, rolling under the inner fence, dashed to the ground or river below. The top rung is little more than waist hira, and any person with very little fort could easily fall over to the water effort could easily fall over to the water below, or, even worse, to the ground beneath the land end of the waiks. It affords practically no obstacle to any one contemplating suicide.

The outer side of the promenade, under which runs the roadway only twelve or fitteen feet below, is protected by a fence made of steel bars woven into a sort of lattice work. It is also nigher than the fence on the inner side, and provides all the protection necessary.

Mrs. Rosenthal, Deserted Wife and Mother, Anxious to Dispose of Her Infant for a Few Years for $400.

Deserted by her husband, without ney or resources, and driven to depair by appeals for help by her aged her in Poland, Mrs. Sarah Rosenthal, of No. 708 Fifth street, offers to sell her pretty little bahy girl, named Pannie, for $400 to any one that promise to give the child a good home and return her to the mother after five or six years.

Mrs. Rosenthal is the daughter of a formerly well-to-do merchant in War-eaw, Poland. After she had been mar-ried two years her husband emigrated to America and she followed him, leaving her first born child, a girl, now about three years old, with her mother. Five weeks ago Fannie, her second child, was born. Her husband could not work and disappeared a few months ago, leaving Mrs. Rosenthal penniless. Mrs. Zupnick, of No. 708 Fifth street. took Mrs. Rosenthal and her baby in and provided for their wants with great kindness. A few days ago the deserted mother received a letter from her mother informing her that she could no asking her to come home and take care of her child. Mrs. Rosenthal was in a desperate position. She felt that she and to do something for her older child. and to secure the means of bringing the child to this country she decided to offer her youngest child for sale.

POLICEMAN RUN DOWN BY A CAR

William K. Purcell's Runabout Struck by a Trolley and He Is Hurled Out and Dragged Under Fender.

William K. Purcell, a policeman attached to the Kingsbridge station, is suffering in the Fordham Hospital from on of the brain, numerous ruises about the body and several scalp wounds received in a collision between his runabout and a Fordham Heights erolley car. Purcell was driving down Kingsbridge ad when trolley car No. 39 came rushing down the steep grade behind him. The locality is badly lighted and on account of the grade the motormen ally take the opportunity to gain me. Purcell did not hear the car ching, and the motorman, Corpolius O'Concer, did not see the rununtil too late to stop the car. The car crashed into the rear of the riage, wrecking it completely. Purand landed on the track directly at of the car, which O'Connor had
